

PARLIAMENTARY PAPER.

REGISTRATION OF BIRTHS, DEATHS, AND MARRIAGES.

By Registrar-General to the Honorable the Colonial Secretary, transmitting Abstracts of Births, Deaths, and Marriages, for the year 1863, with Prefatory Report.

Registrar-General's Office, Sydney, 15th July, 1864.

Sir, I do myself the honor to present to you herewith the annual abstracts of the registration of births, marriages, and deaths, for the year 1863, in the colony of New South Wales, during the year 1863. I purpose, as heretofore, to accompany them with a few explanatory observations upon the chief points of interest which the returns present.

1. The aggregate number of births registered was 15,479; of persons married, 6628; and of deaths, 6663; being an addition of 28,969 new names to the national record.

Estimating the population at the middle of the year at 371,100 souls, the births were at the rate of 4.2 per cent., the persons married 1.77 per cent., and the deaths 1.79 per cent.

The accession to the population by the excess of births over deaths was 9026, or 2.43 per cent.

2. The number born of each sex was as follows, namely:—

	Males.	Females.
Sydney	1207	1154
Suburbs	2562	2500
Country	8896	8590
Total	8065	7644

that is, there were 391 more boys born than girls, or in the proportion of 95 girls to every 100 boys.

3. Comparing the births registered in 1863 with those of the previous year, 1862, an aggregate increase of 245, made up as follows, viz:—

	1862.	1863.	Increase.	Per Cent.
Sydney	2334	2562	127	5.42
Suburbs	4821	5562	741	15.37
Country	11,375	12,551	1176	10.34
Total	15,454	15,679	245	1.59

4. The ratio of births to every 1000 of the estimated population living at the middle of each of the last seven years was as follows, viz:—

	1857.	1858.	1859.	1860.	1861.	1862.	1863.
Sydney	45.11	45.46	45.62	45.56	45.12	45.19	45.24
Suburbs	45.11	45.46	45.62	45.56	45.12	45.19	45.24
Country	45.11	45.46	45.62	45.56	45.12	45.19	45.24

5. The ratio of births to every 1000 of the estimated population living at the middle of each of the last seven years was as follows, viz:—

	1857.	1858.	1859.	1860.	1861.	1862.	1863.
Sydney	45.11	45.46	45.62	45.56	45.12	45.19	45.24
Suburbs	45.11	45.46	45.62	45.56	45.12	45.19	45.24
Country	45.11	45.46	45.62	45.56	45.12	45.19	45.24

6. The difference in the birth rate in the three divisions of the colony appears to be as follows, viz:—

	Sydney.	Suburbs.	Country.
1863.	45.24	45.19	45.24
1862.	45.12	45.19	45.19
Difference	0.12	0.00	0.05

7. The average birth rate in England and Wales to every 1000 of the population is 34.20. It follows, therefore, that the annual addition to the population in New South Wales is greater by 8.7, or nearly 9 per cent., than it is in the Mother Country.

8. The difference in the birth rate in the three divisions of the colony appears to be as follows, viz:—

	Sydney.	Suburbs.	Country.
1863.	45.24	45.19	45.24
1862.	45.12	45.19	45.19
Difference	0.12	0.00	0.05

9. This further fact is elicited, in confirmation of the experience of former years, that the winter months, or more properly speaking, the colder period of the year, from (April to October) is more prolific than the summer period; the winter half of the year numbering 8072 births, whilst the summer half numbered only 7607; a difference of 465, or 5.76 per cent.

10. There were 122 cases in which twins were born.

11. The number of illegitimate births registered was 605, viz:—in Sydney, 129; in the suburbs, 44; and in the country districts, 532; or, in the aggregate, 605, or 3.92 per cent. of the total births in the colony.

12. In 1862 there were 3226 marriages, whilst in 1863 there were only 3314; that is to say, 652 persons were married in the former year, to 6628 in the latter. Of these latter marriages, there were celebrated:—

	Per Cent.
In Sydney	1055, or 32.10
In the suburbs	175, or 5.30
In the country districts	2074, or 62.60
Total	3314, or 100.00

13. With the exception of the year 1860, the marriage rate to the total population in each year was smaller in 1863 than in any of the preceding six years.

14. The annual rate per 1000 of the estimated population in each year is shown below, viz:—

	1857.	1858.	1859.	1860.	1861.	1862.	1863.
Sydney	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96
Suburbs	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96
Country	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96	10.96

15. There are two causes operating to keep down the marriage rate: one is the deficiency of female immigration; the other is the continued depression in the rate of wages, and consequent want of money for the celebration of the ceremony.

16. The number of marriages in the colony, as well as by the District Registrar, without the religious ceremony, is shown below, viz:—

1860 there were only 3314; that is to say, 6652 persons were married in the former year, to 6628 in the latter. Of these latter marriages, there were celebrated :—

17. There were four double marriages in 1863—three in the suburbs, and one in the country districts.

18. The proportion of marriages by each of the churches is shown, for the last seven years, in the following table, viz:—

ment. They have a definite and well-known meaning; they are generally applied in their proper sense, and if applied when that sense is out of the question are simply ridiculous. Not so such comparatively vague terms as "swindler," "impostor," "humbug." These last-mentioned words have a sting in them, their very vagueness; conveying impressions which it is difficult to disprove because it is hard to define. The root of the word swindle, or is probably to be found in the German verb "scheindeln," to vanish. The swindler is, properly speaking, the man who makes himself scarce just at the time when he is called upon to perform something for which he has already received no consideration. The cunning adviser who will obtain you a post worth £100 a year for the tripping sum of £30 down; the "Montague Tigg" of a bubble Insurance office; the plausible workman who offers to regulate your ricketty French watch so that it shall keep time as well as one of Dent's chronometers; these are all swindlers in the true sense of the word, prepared to flit noiselessly and untraceably as soon as they have bagged your money or your watch. Metaphorically, the name is well applied to fallacious promisers, who get something on the strength of their promises without a serious purpose of giving anything in return. Impositor is a simple Latin verbal, the abridged form of impositor, the person who puts (something) upon you. The ellipse is of Latin origin; a cheat was said imponere alicui, without an accusative case specifying the quale quid. So Martial

"Callidus imposuit nuper mihi caupo Ravennas." "The impostor is the man who puts a trick upon you, or, more emphatically, who passes himself on you for something or somebody that he is not. A begging-letter writer, who solicits your alms in the character of a reduced merchant, a disabled sailor, or a teacher out of employ, as may best suit the probable leaning of your sympathies, is perhaps the best type of an impostor in the nineteenth century. We shall not be far wrong if we describe an impostor as a hypocrite with a practical turn. Be it observed, however, that the hypocrite, as such, keeps clear of the law, while the impostor proper, though ingenious in evading the law, is continually violating it. But alas! how many men, even orators and philanthropists, may fairly be called impostors in a secondary sense!

"Humbug," is a very English word, and indicative of a very English feeling. The first syllable seems to represent that almost inarticulate sound by which we imply suspicion or doubt of some statement or proposal submitted to us. Hence the substantive hum for something indefinitely near to a cheat or a lie. The second syllable in old English meant a terror, a sense which it still retains in the compound big-bear. So Hermione in the "Winter's Tale" says of threatened death—

 "The big that you would fright me with, I seek."
 A humbug should then be one in whom the habit of false or dubious profession becomes formidable, or at least annoying. He need not be an absolute hypocrite, but he exaggerates his feelings, his claims, or his powers till you cannot trust, and feel indignant that you cannot expose him. He professes to let his light shine—he may have a farthing candle, but from the fuss he makes one might suppose it an argand burner. There are several humbugs—some-

GENTLEMEN,—take the liberty of addressing you upon a subject of some importance to yourselves and all those who are interested in the intellectual advancement of the * * *

bers of the School of Arts. Perhaps many of you may not be aware that the Discussion Class, which for some years was in operation, in connection with the institution, has now ceased to exist—partly owing to the difference of opinion between the members, and partly owing to the discouragement which the committee of the Debating Class suffered at the hands of the general committee, in their endeavor to obtain a suitable room in which to hold their weekly meetings. The committee of the Discussion Class (of which I was a member) applied for the use of the large hall, but the general committee, otherwise engaged, in which to assemble; but the Committee-in-chief of the Institute refused this request, their reason being the expense of lighting. Since this decision became

Now, Gentlemen, it is an occurrence, I think, totally unprecedented, that an institution of the character and magnitude of the Sydney School of Arts should be without a Discussion Class. And it is a discreditable fact in connection with the School, that there does not exist within the bounds of Sydney proper, a Disputation, or Mutual Improvement Society, where young men can meet upon the broad platform of free discussion. There are one or two mutual improvement societies, but all in connection with religious sects.

It is for you, Gentlemen, to decide whether such an unenviable state of things shall continue, or whether a you will bring your influence to bear upon your general committee, in order to induce them to re-consider their decision, and thus afford an opportunity for the members of the institution to enjoy the intellectual advantages of a discussion, the benefits of which, in all communities, are so generally admitted.

There may be room for questioning the soundness of that principle which extends to all classes, irrespective of education or property, the political rights of electors; but there can be no doubt, taking into consideration the unlimited influence which is possessed by the working classes of this colony, that any man who would attempt to deny to an appreciation of the responsibility of their position, and endow them with intelligence enough to discharge their duties satisfactorily to themselves, and usefully to their country, should be well supported and cheerfully encouraged. Few persons are ready to deny that the re-establishment and the successful operation of a Debating Class in connection with an institution which is so well patronised by the working classes would do much to enlarge the observation, ripen the judgment, and improve the critical powers of those who are so well qualified upon the ground between the frothy declamations of the place-holder and the sound principles of the patriot.

A debating class also affords an opportunity for the youth of the community to learn the most important art of public speaking. Among the present youth must be found the Sir.—Will you allow me, in reference to a letter in your Sunday's issue, the writer of which impeached the conduct of the justices before whom, on the 15th instant, a man named Turner was charged with having stolen certain tools alleged to be the property of John Bates, to say that if, when the writer of that letter had the tools in his possession, he had tested them, there would have been some evidence to go before the Court, and the writer was charged with the larceny. But, the property was not tested. Now, if the Court, how could the prosecutor swear, on Powell's description, that the tools offered to Powell were his property.

had been stolen from him. The magistrate now shut up to the course they pursued, Mr. Powell to the contrary notwithstanding. Your correspondent is exceedingly unhappy in his selection of a case for the illustration of "Horrible Justice." Mr. Rags, who a few days since boasted that he had been, thirteen years a magistrate, and had tried more cases than any other man in the Commission of the Peace, could have furnished your correspondent with many cases more in point.
